Patricia Wegner, Naperville, spoke against the proposed ordinance.

Foley stated the ordinance focuses on the protection of companion animals and detailed substantive changes in the current version such as time periods animals can make noise outside, animals cannot be subjected to extreme temperature conditions, and microchipping regulations. She said fines are doubled, a warranty provision has been included for pet store sales, and education regarding spay and neutering has been added. She also explained how adopting the state law benefits the City.

Council discussed having the store named as the secondary on the microchip registration, the proposed four-year warranty, adopting a humane ordinance, and implementing a grace period for pet stores to comply.

Foley explained while the the ordinance requires that a warranty be provided the City will not enforce the warranty provision.

Council questioned the number of nuisance complaints, the possibility of reducing the proposed time to ten minutes, state regulations, the workload and schedule of the state inspectors, and having businesses pay all medical expenses after purchase. Council also discussed that pet sales are a consumer-driven market, that the City is not being inundated with complaints regarding Naperville stores and it is unnecessary to materially alter their conduct.

Foley explained the USDA inspects once per year or once every 18 months depending on violations. She stated that the goal is compliance and the overwhelming majority of facilities are substantially compliant with USDA rules.

Council discussed the conference call between staff and representatives of the USDA and unintended consequences of the Chicago ordinance.

A motion was made by Councilman Coyne, seconded by Councilman Krummen, to direct staff to revise the ordinance amending Chapter 4 (Animal Control) of Title 10 (Police Regulations) of the Naperville Municipal Code to reduce the day-time time limit for barking dogs from from 20 minutes to ten minutes, require that pet stores must list themselves as a secondary contact on animal microchips, clarify that the four-year warranty period is from the birth of the animal, make the ordinance effective 30 after passage, clarify the section regarding USDA reports to require inspection records to be kept for the period prior to store's possession of any animal, revise the warranty section to make pet stores responsible to refund up to the purchase of the animal, and direct staff to revisit the appropriate temperature related to animals left in vehicles. The motion carried by the following vote:

Aye: 7 - Chirico, Brodhead, Coyne, Gustin, Hinterlong, Krummen, and White

Nay: 1 - Anderson
