Walking Around Naperville and Exploring The Sound

Posted by merna98 March 7, 2020 Posted in Uncategorized

BY: Merna S.

In our lives we don't really pay attention to any other sounds, unless it's the type of sound that could annoy us; its either by someone talking to us or even loud cars or traffic. Sometimes we never look at sound as anything unique to actually pay attention to. For example, I always go on a walk to just relax and calm myself when I am upset, for most of the time, or I just go for a run around my house at 5 A.M. While, running I always hear and feel the wind and air hitting me, makes me feel good. Also, every time my friends and I want to go somewhere to relax and talk, it's either by the Riverwalk or by a waterfall. The sounds of the water, wind, and sometimes traffic calm us down, even traffic and be annoying to us sometimes. In the sounds map I'll be exploring different type of sounds like, biophonic, anthrophonic, and geophonic.

For this sound map, I have chosen Naperville Riverwalk because at night the view is amazing and its actually all calm, to the point that you can only hear the water moving. First area I picked is, the Riverwalk because the sound of the water just makes me feel comfortable and so relaxed. Also, it would sometimes make me just stare at the sky and just think about the future. For me just listening to the water and watching the stars are just so calming. Geophonic is a perfect is example for this water and wind sound, that we usually don't pay attention to.

Also, during the walk around the river not everything is calm and quiet. For Example, traffic/ car drivers, sounds make everything fall apart sometimes. Sometimes it can interrupt conversation or even romantic moment. For example, my friend and I were sitting walking around and we had coffee drinks in our hands and we a talking; and a car on the street was passing by so fast that it almost hit both of us; although, it didn't but we ended up dropping our coffee. However, it was around rush hour so there is really bad traffic at 6P.M. Therefore, traffic and car drives can be really irritating sometime. Moreover, not everyone like busy roads, but some people don't mind traffic, or the way other people drive during a rush hour. Although, traffic may seem annoying to some people, which is kind of true, but actually for me it makes me feel safe that I am not alone and there is sounds around me to keep me company and not scared. Anthrophonic, is the traffic and any human made voice, which in my example traffic and cars sounds can be a bit of distraction. Also, biophonic defined as sounds that cannot be made by human, for example, I have use insect sounds, like frogs.

Walking near the millennium carillon, the bell rings every time the hour changes. Luckily, I got to hear it once the clocked turned exact time, for example, I hear it while I was walking at night at 7PM. The sound of the bell, also, reminds me of church bell. Back when I lived in Egypt every Wednesdays, Fridays, and Sundays the church bell rings, which it is a sign of the literature is about to begin. Also, it rings an hour before the stars and in the middle of the literature as-well. The bell sound reminds me of Egypt, when I use to wake up to it since, I didn't have phone or an alarm back in 2009. The sound of the bell doesn't really irritate or bother me like it does with other people. Moreover, the way I see bell ring is that it brings back good memorize. Also, it could be an alarm for some people that lose track of time. I would say that the bell sound is anthrophonic because human has created it and use it to create sound.

Also, at the Riverwalk, I heard bird sounds that I actually never really paid attention to it from before. Not just at the Riverwalk that I didn't pay attention to the sounds, but my whole life never really cared about nature sound at all; until lately I have been trying to pay attention to everything I hear on daily base. However, the bird sounds were actually so amazing it's like music into my hears that I could actually listen to all day. The sound of birds, also reminds me of when I was in Egypt. The birds usually come and sit at my balcony and doesn't leave till I wake up and open the balcony door. Sometimes, I feel like they're just calling me to wake up because once I wake up and open the balcony they leave. I believe, it's their way of trying to communicate with us human. However, during the walk I didn't see the bird, but I hear its sound from on top the tree. Also, there voice it was music into my ear to hear, which is amazing to hear while doing a night walk. Also, the bird sound can be described as anthrophonic, even though human can imitate the sound; although, it came from birds first and we try copy it. Although, I wasn't able to record the sound because it ended to quickly, but I got to hear the sound.

In conclusion, working on sound map made me think and realize few things that I never really paid attention to it from before, other than sound being described as sounds and nothing especial about it. I have connected to everything I experienced during this project because I had to pay close attention to sound as some unique. Always thought that music is the only thing that can actually be described as interesting sound, but there is a lot of things in our life's we don't pay close attention to and see how amazing it can be. I will always try and look at sounds in a different way now and future.
